

This view from the mid 1950s, from the Blyth side of the river, shows some of the old ironworks' office buildings on the left (at this time they were dwellings) and Dene House on the right. Michael Longridge, the ironworks' manager, had the house built early in the nineteenth century. Later, the Wood family, producers of mineral waters, lived in the property.